CORRESPONDENCE.

A Letter from Mr. Wm. C. Carl.
To The Bloomfield Citizen.

I am now settled in Paris, and hard at work with my studies under Monsieur Alexander Guilmant of "La Trinité." He is a wonderful man and musician, and I can only imagine the sensations it would create if one should visit America. The advantages to a student here are many. Nearly all in Europe is the organ played as in Paris, and one can easily hear four or five of the most noted organists each Sunday at the different cathedrals. I have seen—M. Dubois of La Madeleine, Mons. Gigout of St. Augustin, (who has written a book asking for an original theme, and giving a brilliant improvisation upon it.) Mons. Cesar Franck (St. Clotilde), Mons. Charles Mairé (St. Eustache), Mons. Deshayes (Annonciation), Mons. L. de la Tombelle, Mons. Th. Salomé, and always attend either one or two or three each Sunday with Mons. Guilmant at La Trinité. I am now filling an engagement at the "Eglise Américaine de Sainte Trinité," (Avenue de l'Alma,) which contains one of the best and most modern organ in Paris, built by Mons. Cavaillé-Coll, the principal French builder. I still play ten or more services a week in Paris, and am very good. Twice I have heard "Messiaen" the new opera by Mons. Camille Saint-Saëns, one of the "Guillotines Tell" by Rossini. This house is magnificent, and a visit to it would alone repay a visit to Paris. Between each act the entire audience repair to the "oyer" and "grand staircase" to promenade, and the scene is a most brilliant one. On Tuesday last I attended a "messe" given by Mons. Gigout, and had the pleasure of hearing Mons. Saint-Saëns play. More especially did I enjoy the treat, as he is now seldom heard.

July 14th was the national fete day of the French Republic, and the sight here was almost dazzling. The review of the troops of France by the President in the afternoon, and the decorations and illuminations of the city in the evening were the principal features of the day. A holiday here is observed by everyone. The boulevards are thronged with people from early morning till long after midnight. The Illuminations, the great hotel world draw the greatest sight I have seen here, and was done principally with gas. Puddings of gas jets were on both sides of the Champs Elysées, to the Place de la Concorde. Every bridge crossing the Seine was decorated with myriads of colored lights, and on both banks of the river were thousands of colored lanterns. Then with the fireworks, the illuminated fountains at the Champs de Mars, the Trocadero, Exposition Buildings, and the Eiffel Tower, and not forgetting the procession of boats presented a sight that even Venice could not surpass. I was fortunate in seeing President Carnot on his return from Longchamps.

On July 4th, our national holiday, I attended a reception given by Mr. Wifford Reid, the American Minister, at his palatial residence in Avenue Hoch, and met many Americans. I feel that I have gained much from my trip, and Tuesday next will end the first three months of my sojourn abroad.

With kind regards,
WILLIAM C. CARL,

Villa Beaujour.

A Bloody Riot Recalled.

"Nineteen years ago today," said Inspector Byrnes, "I shall never forget that day's duty. I was ordered over to the office of a headquarter from my previous day's work. I was captain of the Twenty-first, and took over one of my men along, except for the sergeant, Davenport and a drummer. We expected trouble, and I had a lot of hand grenades brought by the second story window in the old station house in Thirty-fifth street, told the sergeant to look the darts and go. He went, but would try to enter. Old Dave was as good as an army when it came to staying. He just sat on that pile of hand grenades and waited.

He had a good long wait, if we didn't. The man who walked in that bloody procession from the Eighteenth avenue headquarter of the Germans to the old Hartmann in the Barbary will be apt to remember it to their dying day. I can hear the crowd yell to shoot right and left. From the rear, the house, it rained bricks and hot lead. A hundred must have been killed before the end of that march of terror and death.

"It was 6 o'clock the next morning before we got back to our station. It was dark and still the graves. As we happened on the door and yelled a window in the second story was slowly and cautiously opened and old Dave said:

"Who is there?"

"Open the door," yelled the tired men. "Open it or we'll burst it in." "We will," etc. came from upstairs in shell houses, and in the window appeared the old sergeant, fighting mad, with a hand grenade, very fat and an armful in reserve, as a boy never saw before. "Stand back there" or there will be murder. Back I say."

We had some sit the long and bloody way, fighting every inch of it, without a thought of showing the white feather. Every mother's son would have been killed twice over rather than turn tail. But we ran them. Before we left, with his armful of hand grenades, the sergeant who had saved a city from burning, was left to hold the fort alone until we cooked him from shelter into complete bending that we were not the enemy. Then he came down and let us in. —New York Telegram.
